PURIM.

THE JEWISH FESTIVAL AND ITS MODE OF OBSERVATION.

At sundown to-morrow the Israelites will enter upon the observance of two days of rejoicing, which, although established subsequently to the law of Moses, are nevertheless, by the unanimous consent of the whole Jewish nation, received and observed as a religious festival. The contemporaries of the events which it commemorates "ordained and took it upon themselves and their seed and upon all such as joined themselves unto them not to fail in keeping of these two days." Therefore the observance, as a religious vow on the part of their ancestors, confirmed by those who at the time were invested with due authority, is plating upon the Hebrews and their descendants the legal stamp.

The festival is destined to commemorate the miraculous deliverance of the Jewish nation from the destruction counseled by Haman to his King, Ahasuerus. The schemes of the wily favorite; the adhesion of the Oriental despot to the intended sacrifice; the heroic efforts made by the pious Queen Esther to save her people.
